Join NAM (National Arbitration and Mediation) and members of The Association of Corporate Counsel New York City Chapter for a night to remember!

The Players is a private social club founded in 1888 when Edwin Booth, the greatest American actor of his time, purchased a Gothic Revival-style mansion facing Gramercy Park and commissioned architect Stanford White to transform it into a certain club "for the promotion of social intercourse between the representative members of the dramatic profession and the kindred professions of literature, painting, sculpture and music, and the patrons of the arts." More than 130 years later, the tradition continues.

Guests will enjoy:

- Premium selection of cocktails and hors d'oeuvres
- Performances from several cast members from hit Broadway musicals.
- Exclusive tours of this National Historic Landmark mansion provided by a docent during the event.
- Access to the entire first floor of The Players Club to explore historic theater artifacts and artwork.
- Stunning views of Gramercy Park from the gothic terrace.

Guests must be registered to attend.
